5 Passage 2: 12

If a person uses two languages in everyday life, he or she is said to be bilingual. Only a few people whom we would call bilingual can speak, read, or write both languages equally well. We call those who can do this “balanced bilinguals”. But most bilinguals have a preferred language, which they use most of the time, and then a second language. The level and use of which will vary considerably from one person to another.

Children raised bilingually from a very early age are more likely to have an equal skill of both. There are bilingual societies in many parts of the world. Members of these communities use two (or more) languages at the same time. (This does not mean that everyone living in these countries is bilingual.) Bilingualism also occurs in other areas of the world where immigrant groups have lived. They keep up many of their own customs, so they continue to speak their own language at home. In many cases, the bilinguals are not themselves immigrants, but people whose parents, or even grandparents, moved to the country in question and have continued to speak to their children in their own mother tongue.
