Parents care for their children from a very young age and try their best to provide them with a good life. They spend a lot of time and energy teaching their children how to behave and make good decisions. For this reason, respecting parents is considered a basic responsibility.During childhood, parents provide food, education, and safety for their children. As children grow older, they become more independent, but they still need their parents' advice and support. Showing respect can include listening to parents, speaking kindly to them, and appreciating their efforts.	۶
