Grandparents hold a special place in many families, often serving as a connection between the past and the present. They are the keepers of family history, sharing stories, traditions, and values that have been passed down through generations. Beyond simply describing the past, grandparents offer a unique understanding of life, gained through years of experience and gradually increased wisdom. Their advice, though sometimes unusual, can be invaluable in directing the challenges of modern life.

Respecting grandparents is more than just a matter of politeness; it's an understanding of their role to our lives and families. This respect can be shown in various ways, from actively listening to their stories and seeking their help, to showing patience and understanding when their physical or mental abilities becomes weak. Often, they may be slower to learn new technologies or have different opinions on modern topics, yet these differences are opportunities for closer dialogue and better understanding of them

Besides, spending time with grandparents provides opportunities to learn valuable life lessons. They can teach practical skills, such as cooking or gardening, or share historical insights and ethical views. Their unconditional love and support can provide a sense of security and belonging, particularly during difficult times. In a rapidly changing world, the stability and connection offered by grandparents are very valuable. By honoring their wisdom and appreciating their presence, we not only increase their lives but also strengthen the connections that hold families together, making sure that traditions and values continue to exist.

Note-taking is a necessary part of the language learning. It helps students learn, keep, and remember information. Taking notes make them think differently about the subject; it requires the learners to look at things differently. It also helps them pay attention during the class because they are actively listening and experiencing in the classroom. Not only do the students meet their needs by taking good notes in English classes, but everyone should find note-taking as the best way to work with written and spoken texts. Taking notes let learners check interesting points from what they are researching, reading or listening to. Writing some parts in their own words, also called note-making, makes everything clear for the note takers when looking back at the text. It is a much better learning technique than just depending on your own memory. Remember that word-for-word note-taking can hurt systematic thinking as it takes away the time of explaining ideas through examples and pictures by just writing down facts without context. It is why Isaac Newton said that he did great things just because he was sitting in the great men's classes and taking notes.

❖ True / False

55. Note-taking makes learners different in thinking. a. True b. False

56. You should write in your own words when taking notes. a. True b. False
