Reading passage

We tend to view someone who is over 65 as "old", and, in many cultures, that can mean being sidelined at work, disrespected on a daily basis, or generally ignored by family and society. Sadly, we don't always view the experience and knowledge of those who have come before us as something to be treasured and sought out. These attitudes can affect the way elders view themselves and negatively influence their lives. People feel that they are losing value as they age and even feel ashamed about what is actually a natural process. They start to accept loneliness as their norm and stop seeking connection with their communities.

One way to prevent this is to understand that we can boost elders' sense of self-worth through kindness, interaction, and the creation of intergenerational programs. Including them in community gatherings and everyday activities and valuing what they have to offer us can help them feel greatly honored. Older generations have stories to tell, and if you are willing to listen, you can receive priceless advice on a variety of subjects, like parenting. Many of them just want to be heard, to feel valued, and to have the ability to share the knowledge they gained from experience with the younger generation.

1. Which of the following does the author agree about old people?
a) We should seek their advice on different subjects no matter what.
b) They feel appreciate if we listen attentively to what they have to say.
c) We should include them in daily activities to help them stay physically healthy.
d) They need to change their attitudes towards the younger generation.

2. In the second paragraph, the author is trying to …… mentioned in paragraph one.
a) recommend a way to solve the problem b) further support the problem
c) explain the effects of the problem d) raise doubts about reasons

3. According to the passage, the fact that we often label people over "65" as old is ……
a) a problem to be solved b) something ethical but immoral
c) a predictable situation d) a religious principle

4. The underlined word "intergenerational" in the 2nd paragraph is closest in meaning to ……..
a) between people from different age groups b) between people from different nations
c) involving countries of the same interest d) involving nations of the same values.
