	Natural resources are materials that come from nature, such as water, air, soil, forests, minerals, and fossil fuels. Water is one of the most important natural resources on Earth. Humans, animals, and plants all need water to live. We use water for drinking, farming, and producing electricity. Air is another vital resource because all living things need oxygen to breathe. Forests are valuable natural resources as well. They provide wood, food, and medicine. Forests also help keep the air clean by absorbing carbon dioxide and producing oxygen. In addition, they are home to many animals and plants. Some natural resources, like sunlight and wind, are renewable. This means they will not run out if we use them wisely. However, resources such as oil, gas, and coal are non-renewable. Once they are used up, they cannot be replaced. Today, Earth's natural resources are in danger because of pollution, overuse, and climate change.
