Even when asleep the body needs energy. The more active a person is; the more energy the body uses. The energy comes from the chemical " burning" of carbohydrates, fats, proteins, and certain other substances. The energy values of different foods can be measured by burning them in a special small oven called a calorimeter. Energy in food is often measured in calories. One kilocalorie, usually written as kcl or Calorie, is the amount of energy required to raise the temperature of one kilogram of water by ۱° Celsius. In fact, the Calorie is a unit of heat, not energy. In the modern system of measurements, energy is measured in joules. (۱ Calorie equals ٤،۲ kilojoules.) You can find the calorie content of almost any food by looking in a slimming or diet magazine. An adult need, on average, a little under ۳۰۰۰ Calories a day. A manual worker would need ٤۰۰۰ or more, because of the energy used in physical activity. Children, who are growing and also very active, need extra Calories as well. As people become older, they need fewer Calories, partly because they are physically less active and some of their body tissues become chemically less active.

۱. The best topic for the passage is ----------.

a. Carbohydrates b. Energy and Food c. Fats and Proteins d. Chemical Burning

۲.The energy values of foods can be measured by the activity of the person.

a. True b. False

۳. The passage points out that Calorie is actually a unit of heat.

a. True b. False

٤. Why do children need more Calories?
