۴	Language is the most common system of communication. It makes it possible for people to talk to each other and write their thoughts and ideas. Each society creates a language which is adequate for its own needs. Language is not created in its final form but changes and develops to meet new needs. Many languages of economically underdeveloped countries have fewer words of science and technology because the people have a limited need for them. On the other hand, they may have more words for things in their daily lives, for example, for their local products, different types of rain or snow and etc. If new words are needed, they have no trouble in adding them into their language, either by "borrowing" from other languages or by combination of native words. ٤٦.
