When moving to a new culture, international students must deal with a language that many be unfamiliar, incomperhensible customs and values, and cultural expectations the students may not be fuiil aware of. As a result, the students may go through emotional estremes ranging from excitement with the bew culture to depression. I, like most foreign students, had to fact the harsh reality of culture shock as I pursued my college career. But it wasn't an easy process. There's no magic pill or vaccine. To be successful, international students become familiar with the process of culture shock, a process that became my way of feeling at ease with French culture.

	Reading two. Read the passage and then avswer the questions. Even when asleep,the body needs energy. The more active a person is, the more energy the body uses. The energy comes from the chemical "burning" of carbohydrates, fats, proteins, and certain other substances such as alcohol. The energy values of different foods can be measured by burning them in a special small called a calorimeter. Energy in food is often measured in calories. One kilocalorie, usually written as kcal or calorie (with a capital C), is the amount of energy required to raise the temperature of one kilocalorie of water by ١° Celsius. In fact, the Calorie is a unit of heat, not energy. In the modern system of measurements, energy is measured in joules. (١ Calorie equals ٤,٢ kilojoules.) You can find the calorie content of almost any food by looking in a slimming magazine or book. An adult needs, on average, a little under ٣٠٠٠ Calories a day. A manual worker would need ٤٠٠٠ or more, because of the energy used up in physical activity. Children, who are growing and also very active, need extra Calories as well. As people become older they need fewer Calories, partly they are physically less active and partly because some of their body tissues become chemically less active ٤١. What does one kilocalorie mean? ٤٢. How can the energy values of foods be measured? ٤٣. Calorie is actually a unit of energy. a. true b. false ٤٤.Old people need fewer Calories than manual workers a. true b. false	۲
