Passage 1

2.5

Nelson Mandela was born in South Africa on July 18, 1918. He spent most of his life fighting for people's rights. From 1948-1994, the all-white South African government forced blacks to live separate lives from whites. Blacks had to eat at separate restaurants and go to separate schools. Marriage between blacks and whites was illegal. This system of segregation was called apartheid. Nelson Mandela wanted apartheid to end. He wanted black people to have the right to vote and the right to have good jobs. Mandela organized several government protests. In 1963, the government sent him to prison for life. Mandela spent 27 years in jail. After his release in 1990, Mandela helped end apartheid. In the next few years, he won the Nobel Peace Prize and became president of South Africa. Nelson Mandela died in 2013. People celebrate his life every year on Mandela Day (July 18).

Passage 2

We have always been taught to respect our parents and elders. But don't children and young people deserve the same respect?

As parents, we become the provider for our children. We provide them with food, clothing, shelter, security. health, education, etc. as these are the basic needs of an individual. But do we ever consider that being respected is also a human need for their overall personality development!

Children learn more from our actions than our words. It's quite effective to model to our children how respectful communication looks like rather than to keep telling them, 'Speak to me respectfully', 'that's not how you speak to your mother'. Children pick up language, accent, and vocabulary from their elders without being forced to learn. Likewise, isn't it possible that they even choose our tone of speaking too!

When we constantly speak to our children respectfully, they learn that they deserve respect and grow up as adults with higher self-worth and self-value and won't allow anyone to mistreat or disrespect them when they grow up. On the contrary, if we deal with our children with disrespect, we are showing that this is what they are worthy of and will grow up accepting rude behavior.

38) what is considered as a human need for the overall personality development of our children?

39) How do our children learn that they deserve respect?

……

True Or False

40) Children and young people don’t deserve respect. True □ False □

41) By respectfully speaking to children, they learn to respect others. True □ False □

42) Children learn more from our words than our actions. True □ False □
